

Case Study: Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery (but will Mom agree?)

Case Study

People always said how much I look like my mother. So I decided to put it to the test, to see if it was true. And you know me, I never do anything halfway. These are fusion hair extensions. Even shaved and waxed my legs.

Turns out, I really do look like her. Not like she does now, of course, or in recent years, but back when she was my age---for sure. These are even her clothes from back then.

Mother hasn't worn this stuff in years, so she won't miss 'em. And yeah, you guessed it, I haven't told the folks about this little experiment. It'll be a surprise.

Amanda Hawkins

The question is, what do I do now? The study's over, I guess. But I do kinda like the way I look. The legs, the hair, cute little skirt, Louboutin heels... it all works.

The pumps are new, actually. So is the lingerie. It all just makes me feel so energized.

Dunno if I'll go all the way, but I think I shall femulate for awhile. Maybe take a different name...

Mom's name is Lorraine...