Attention Internet Users

This person is not a woman... nor is she even female. This is, in fact, a teenage boy whose mother insisted that he enter a womanless beauty contest and then took it upon herself to make good and sure that he could win. Human-hair fused extensions are a competitive advantage. So are the kind of breast forms that stick to your skin and move naturally with your body. None of the other contestants was able to wear a strapless gown. But what gave Jennifer (née Jeremy) a real competitive edge was being maneuvered into living full-time as a girl for the nine weeks prior to the pageant. Unfortunately, he ended up disqualified on the grounds of being insufficiently male. And thanks to a ridiculously realistic prosthesis between his legs, lifting his skirts didn’t really help either.